"And Meloni wasted the first year of her term of office to mitigate the Draghi change; to check the devastation Si-Plan - to then be slowed down by the greatest. "The PNRR was partly to be confirmed." In his balance sheet of a huge help. It should be extended," says Punzi. But it will not come to that. Until 31. August, payment applications can be submitted to the EU Commission. After that, it's over. Tito Boeri is an economist at the University of Milan Bocconi. In the year, he and his colleague Robert Perotti wrote an annual balance sheet of the PNRR. Has Italy mastered the task tatsächlich »rntt - _Bravour«, as Meloni erdarte? "Unfortunately no," says Boeri. He shows how the ministries hastily set up projects that he often describes as "banal". For example, 100,000 euros should make a medieval knight's tower in Roccaromana near Naples energy efficient, but the bulwark is only open on Sundays from 3 to 5.30 p.m. The Tuscan municipality of Cavriglia expanded its golf course with four million euros from the EU to 18 holes, including a new clubhouse. , Meloni's government draws a positive biging that did nothing, to the ground - lanz. 674,000 projects have been financed and settled problems of the 1stälischer Volks-, of which 570,000 have been completed, means to tackle the economy. "We've wasted a unique opportunity." Already in the years before the pandemic, the EU Commission had called on Italy to do so in response to a SPIEGEL inquiry. Italy has now spent 143 million dollars on this. The public administration is to open up a more efficient and reliable labor market, to strengthen competitiveness and to improve the education system. The PNRR was supposed to deliver these and other reforms. However: "There has only been very limited, if any, no progress." Boeri criticizes all three Italian re- . In detail -Jassen do not check such and other success messages. What happens to the many open projects? Boeri remains skeptical. If ambitious guidelines no longer seemed to be achievable, civil servants would simply have corrected the target leaders, who would be- margin downwards with the aid package. At KinderAUSLAND 55 Head of Government Meloni: "This task mastered with flying colors" gardens, for example, instead of 264,000 new places, only 150,000 were requested after a plan revision. In this way, specifications have been made achievable "even at the last minute", according to his balance sheet. As a result, numerous authorities were simply not prepared for such an "unprecedented flood of funds". Italy's ability to design, tender and implement so many projects has been "significantly overestimated". And now? Meloni's minister Tommaso Foti, who is responsible for the PNRR, is optimistic despite the criticism. It is a "demanding challenge that we are successfully mastering," he says. Italy is working to reduce the remaining risks - and has even become a reference point for the EU with its most ambitious program in Europe. _ Gaetano Punzi continues to rely on his dam. He and his engineer Sebastiano Cassisi have no shortage of ideas. "We want to cover the surface of the water with floating solar panels," he says. "Then we lose less water by evaporation - and generate green energy." Punzi hopes that the construction can be completed next spring. Then just with other subsidies.
